Cal Chamber Releases Preliminary List of Job Killer Bills

Each year the California Chamber of Commerce releases a list of “job killer” bills to call attention to the negative impact that proposed measures would have on California’s job climate and economic recovery if they were to become law. The Redondo Beach Chamber will look at each and every Job Killer and decide whether or not we need to become vocal opposition in order to protect our local businesses.

The list is preliminary at this point because CalChamber expects to add more bills to the list in the coming weeks as legislation is amended. CalChamber will periodically release “job killer” watch updates as legislation changes. Currently, the Redondo Beach Chamber has taken positions on most of the bills in the preliminary list.

The preliminary list of 2015 “job killer” bills follows:

INCREASED LABOR COSTS

- AB 357 (Chiu; D-San Francisco) Predictable Scheduling Mandate/Protected Leave of Absence — Imposes an unfair, one-size fits all, two-week notice scheduling mandate on certain employers that perform retail sales activity, and penalizes these employers with “additional pay” for making changes to the schedule with less than two weeks notice, and additionally imposes an unlimited, protected leave of absence from work as well as a broad new protected class of employees who are receiving public assistance or have an identified family member receiving such assistance.

- SB 3 (Leno; D-San Francisco/ Leyva; D-Chino) Automatic Minimum Wage Increase — Unfairly increases employers costs while ignoring the economic factors or other costs of employers by increasing the minimum wage by $3.00 over the next two and a half years with automatic increases tied to inflation.

- SB 406 (Jackson; D-Santa Barbara) Significant Expansion of California Family Rights Act — Creates less conformity with federal law by dramatically reducing the employee threshold from 50 to less than 5 employees and expanding the family members for whom leave may be
What Would It Take?

I have frequently asked my self the same question over and over again each time a new project is proposed in the community to improve the quality of life for Redondo Beach residents, our neighbors living throughout the Southern California region, and visitors from other states and countries. That elusive question is one that shouldn’t have to be asked, let alone thought of in other communities, but then again, Redondo Beach has unfortunately become a very divisive city, unlike others.

The question is what would it take for Redondo Beach residents to unanimously stand up together in support of our waterfront. All we have seen by opponents of the revitalization project is what they don’t want but no-where in plain sight is a “Plan B” alternative that would make economic sense for the developer who is actually putting up the money to make their investment “pencil out”.

It’s always very easy to play with someone else’s money when there is no risk involved for making wrong decisions. And its also very easy to use scare tactics to oppose a project that deliberately make false assumptions that simply do not exist.

If I had my way, I’d simply sit back and allow the process that’s in place for reviewing and approving a project to actually take place. Unfortunately, those individuals who complain the most who use those scare tactics don’t trust the process that’s been in place since the California Environmental Quality Act was put in place in 1970. It’s a process that allows a project to be approved if specific environmental mitigations are put in place to minimize the impacts of a project. It’s a process that, if followed correctly, would identify all substantial adverse environmental conditions and require those to be minimized.

For those who oppose a project, using a process like this would require them to concede, compromise, and admit that they actually want a project that would improve the quality of life along the waterfront.

From my middle-of-the-road perspective, this shouldn’t be that difficult to do since compromise is the way that most every issue and problem gets solved in every community everywhere. Unfortunately, I don’t have that much faith with an opposition that has shown absolutely “zero” interest in figuratively “sharing the ball”, cutting the loaf of bread in two, or working together for the benefit of every Redondo Beach resident.

For the CenterCal project, I hope I’m wrong and we finally find a way to work together.

At least for this one time, lets do what’s best for everyone. Is that possible in this particular instance? Just once?

I certainly hope so since there is too much at stake to simply say no.

Redondo Beach, Gears up for the 2015 Special Olympics World Games

The Redondo Beach Chamber is so proud to be supporting and participating in the Special Olympics World Games Host Town program from July 21 – 24, 2015. Before the Special Olympics World Games begin on July 25, 2015, more than 7,000 athletes from 177 countries will be welcomed to Southern California through the Host Town program.

As Host a Town, Redondo Beach is set to receive delegations from Benin, Haiti, and Suriname. These delegations will spend July 21-24, 2015 in Redondo Beach Cities as they become acclimated to the time zone, enjoy activities that these cities have to offer and prepare to compete at the World Games.

“As a twenty-year volunteer for Special Olympics Southern California, I am truly amazed at the quality of people that participate in this cause. From the organizers, to the sponsors and especially the athletes, I am proud that the citizens of Redondo Beach and the entire South Bay have proven that we can meet any challenge!” said Steve Aspel, Mayor of Redondo Beach. “I truly hope that our guests have a wonderful experience at these World Games and simply enjoy the competition and the camaraderie!” I echo Mayor Aspel’s sentiments and encourage our members and residents to take part in helping Redondo Beach provide our guests with the best experience ever! taken, which will provide a California-only, separate 12-week protected leave of absence on both small and large employers to administer, thereby increasing costs and risk of litigation.

INCREASED FUEL COSTS

- SB 350 (de León; D-Los Angeles) Costly and Burdensome Regulations — Potentially increases costs and burdens on all Californians by mandating an arbitrary and unrealistic reduction of petroleum use by 50%, increasing the current Renewable Portfolio Standard to 50% and increasing energy efficiency in buildings by 50%—all by 2030 without regard to the impact on individuals, jobs and the economy.

- SB 684 (Hancock; D-Berkeley) Increased Tax Rate — Threatens to significantly increase the corporate tax rate on publicly held corporations and financial institutions up to 15% according to the wages paid to employees in the United States, and threatens to increase that rate by 50% thereafter, if the corporation or institution reduces its workforce in the United States and simultaneously increases its contractors.

- SCA 5 (Hancock; D-Berkeley) Lowers Vote Requirement for Tax Increases — Adds complexity and uncertainty to the current tax structure and pressure to increase taxes on commercial, industrial and residential property owners by giving local governments new authority to enact special taxes, including parcel taxes, by lowering the vote threshold from two-thirds to 55%.

INCREASED BURDENSOME ENVIRONMENTAL REGULATION

- AB 356 (Williams; D-Santa Barbara) Limits In-State Energy Development — Jeopardizes high-paying middle class jobs in resource extraction fields by severely restricting wastewater injection sites and requiring unnecessary monitoring of those sites.

- AB 1490 (Rendon; D-Lakewood) Limits In-State Energy Development — Drives up fuel prices and energy prices by imposing a de facto moratorium on well stimulation activities by halting the activity after an earthquake of a magnitude 2.0 or higher.

- SB 32 (Pavley; D-Agoura Hills) Halts Economic Growth — Increases costs for California businesses, makes them less competitive and discourages economic growth by adopting further greenhouse gas emission reductions for 2030 and 2050 without regard to the impact on individuals, jobs and the economy.

How I Cut the Cable and Lived to Tell About It

By Harry Munns

It seems like I’ve been selling something for much of my adult life. You might expect me to approach other sales people with a certain amount of kindness and understanding. You’d be wrong. Most of the time I stop them before the first persuasive word floats from their mouths. No thanks. Not interested. Make your next call.

For some reason, when my last two cable TV contracts expired, I let the sales person talk me into signing a new contract with almost no resistance. Amazingly, both times I was determined to dump that money-hungry company before I got on the call. I still don’t understand how a few more pay channels and five or ten dollars less a month convinced me to continue paying well over $1,000 per year just to make sure something came out of my TV when I turned it on.

This time was different. I heard about what I’ll call New TV and I was determined to get it. I started by looking at the various Internet TV options. The three most popular are Apple TV, Hulu and Chromecast. There are a few others. Some things about the New TV were apparent. You can access many, if not most, cable TV channels plus Netflix, Youtube and a few others that didn’t appear as options on my cable menu. This content comes through your Internet connection, not a cable TV box. So Apple TV, Hulu and Chromecast are just pieces of hardware that connect your TV to your router.

What wasn’t apparent during my research phase was a sort of bait and switch. Some channels, like History and A&E, don’t just come out of your router and into your TV. You need to use your cable TV subscription to watch them on your New TV, no cable TV account – no A&E.

Thankfully the fear of life without Duck Dynasty or American Pickers was overwhelmed by my anger at paying $120 a month to the cable company. I bought an Apple TV and called the cable company.

“My contract’s up and I want to cancel my cable subscription.”

“May I ask why?”

“Yes you may.” Pause

“Why?”

“Because I don’t want cable TV anymore.”

There was a little more to the conversation than that but the cable company representative was much less persistent than I expected. A day later, my TV screen went dark.

I had no choice but to explore my Apple TV. I discovered that although I had an icon for CBS on my list of channels, I couldn’t see 60 Minutes at 7 PM Sunday night.
Did you know May is ALS Awareness Month?

This month, we recognize all those living with ALS, commonly known as Lou Gehrig’s disease. If you don’t know someone already living with this currently incurable, progressive neurodegenerative disease, the odds are that you will during your lifetime, as a new person is diagnosed with ALS in the US every 90 minutes. This month, upwards of 500 people will be diagnosed with ALS.

ALS affects the body by attacking motor neurons (nerve cells) of the brain and spinal cord. Motor neurons are cells which process and transmit signals which help to control muscles. Destruction of motor neuron cells leads to symptoms related to loss of muscle control. Typical symptoms of ALS include inability to walk, speak, eat and even breathe. ALS typically affects people over the age of 40, including those who were previously enjoyed excellent health in the prime of their lives.

FIVE THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT ALS:

- ALS is NOT just an old person’s disease, many people in their 20s and 30s are diagnosed
- More than a dozen different familial genetic mutations have been linked to onset, however, the vast majority of ALS is considered sporadic with the exact cause(s) unknown
- Because the process is one only of exclusion, it can take a year or more to get a confirmed diagnosis of ALS on average
- There are more than 150 potential treatments being looked at for ALS in the US today
- The ALS clinical network is incredibly supportive for trial initiation, enrollment and retention.

You can learn more about ALS at http://www.alsa.org/about-als/what-is-als.html
BCHD Launches Free Summer Fitness Series May 11th

Public can attend “Yoga on the Beach” and “Zumba in the Park” in Manhattan Beach and Redondo Beach as part of the 12-week community health initiative.

Beach Cities Health District (BCHD), in partnership with the cities of Redondo Beach and Manhattan Beach, will kick off a 12-week free fitness series Monday, May 11th at 6:30 P.M. on the Manhattan Beach sand. This marks the fourth consecutive year BCHD is offering free summer fitness to Beach Cities residents.

Officially titled “Beach Cities Free Fitness Summer Series,” the public workouts will be held each Monday at 6:30 P.M. and include Yoga on the Beach (May 11 – June 8) and Zumba in the Park (June 15 – Aug. 3). All members of the public are encouraged to attend and, as BCHD Chief Executive Officer Susan Burden says, “have fun moving naturally and connecting socially.”

“We created the fitness series as a way for residents to experience the benefits of group exercise and natural movement in a pressure-free environment,” says Burden. “The workouts are designed so everyone can participate in them, regardless of age or ability level. So gather your friends and family, and come enjoy free fitness in the beautiful Southern California sunshine.”

Last summer, more than 4,300 people participated in the family-friendly fitness series, including 535 kids as well as elected officials from all three Beach Cities. Additionally on May 3rd, BHCD wrapped up its “Free Fitness Weekends” initiative, where more than 30 private fitness studios offered a variety of free exercise classes to the public during the first weekend of each month. More than 1,000 residents participated in Free Fitness Weekends since February.

Below are the Beach Cities Free Fitness Summer Series dates, times and fitness offerings.

Business Spotlight – Harmony Yoga, 105 Years in the Making

Harmony Yoga, the #1 voted yoga studio in the South Bay, is the product of more than 100 years of entrepreneurship and service to Redondo Beach and South Bay residents. Najla Barile’s (the owner and director of Harmony Yoga) family has had businesses in Redondo Beach for more than 100 years – from the first dry cleaners in the South Bay to now having the #1 rated yoga studio in the South Bay – “We have gone from helping you look great; to helping you feel great, explains, Barile.”

A HERITAGE OF SERVING THE COMMUNITY – THE INSPIRATION

In 1905, Najla’s grandfather William Coury, started a dry cleaning company called French Method Cleaning. It was the first dry cleaner in the south bay. He would pick up and deliver customer’s cleaning in a horse and buggy. His deliveries would reach as far as Los Angeles. In time, her grandfather opened up several more dry cleaners, he wanted to establish his business to be a reflection of his family, so in 1907, he renamed his business Coury and Son Cleaners.

Najla’s father continued to work in Redondo Beach and in 1990, started Rayson Window Coverings. Some of Najla’s fondest memories are hanging out with her father at their cleaners in the 1980’s and remembering what a friendly atmosphere there was – “people would come and bring donuts and coffee and just want to hang out with my dad and his brothers and they would talk and share stories.”

Police officers would bring in their uniforms and would get their dry-cleaning for free. It was a different time. People weren’t so rushed, and the atmosphere was very inviting.

I was able to see it Monday and I’m pretty sure I could have seen it later Sunday but I never tried because I got busy watching other things.

The main difference between the New TV and the old TV is the concept of schedule, which was leftover from the days of serial radio programs. The family would gather around the scratchy sounding old box and listen to performers like Milton Berle. Some of the same performers showed up later on scratchy sounding and looking TVs doing similar performances while thousands of people squinted to see if they could make out any facial features. The scratchiness got better but the idea of watching certain things at certain times continued until the technology changed.

TiVo, on-demand and DVR users have already become comfortable with the ability to watch what they want, when they want it. New TV gives us an almost limitless archive of past programs to watch and re-watch at our leisure. Live, scheduled TV has almost no relevance to this new model.

It’s hard to say how old TV will fit with the New TV. Radio didn’t go away when TV came along so they will certainly co-exist. I heard an announcement today that the major cable TV company I left will give subscribers the ability to choose the channels they want instead of forcing them to buy a more expensive package. It’s hard to say whether the change of this business model is too little, too late for the industry at large. They’re going to have to do a little better than that to get this former cable TV consumer back. ■
