CHAMBER HELPS PASS MAJOR LEGISLATIVE INITIATIVES IN 2015

This year the Redondo Beach Chamber of Commerce’s Government Relations Council (GRC) took positions on 42 legislative proposals that came before the California State Legislature. The Chamber successfully helped pass nine pieces of legislation, and helped kill one bad bill that reached the desk of Governor Jerry Brown. Below is a snapshot that includes all of the legislation that reached the governor’s desk and either passed or failed. For the entire Legislative Matrix, please visit http://chamber.visitredondo.com/positions.html.

As always, there are several pieces of key legislation to acknowledge from the scorecard. The Chamber was a major supporter of AB 306 authored by our local assembly member, David Hadley. AB 306 would allow for active military personnel to be able to send their children to a school district of their choice and receive preferential status in the school transfer process. This has been a key issue for the Los Angeles Air Force Base (LAAFB) and those who serve there. Assemblyman Hadley was able to create bi-partisan support with Assemblywoman Autumn Burke and Senator Ben Allen to get the bill through both houses of the legislature and have it signed by the governor. AB 306 was a main focus of the Chamber during our participation in the annual South Bay Association of Chambers of Commerce (SBACC) legislative trip to Sacramento in May. The passage of this bill is a monumental win for our Chamber, regional economy, and the LAAFB.

The Chamber was also very instrumental in negotiating amendments on important legislation. Originally, SB 350 would have called for 50% reductions in fossil fuels usage and production, a 50% increase in energy efficiencies in buildings, and 50% of the entire energy portfolio of public utilities to come from renewable sources all by 2030. The original bill set a costly mandate without any feasible roadmap on how to achieve it, as well as been a potential reason for a skyrocket in energy prices for consumers. Assemblyman Hadley worked with a coalition of democrats and republicans to amend the legislation. In the end, the provision for 50% reduction in fossil fuels was removed. Although SB 350 did pass and was still opposed by the Chamber, we do appreciate the efforts of our regional elected officials who helped remove one of the three concerning components of the bill. Governor Brown did sign this bill and issued an executive order that replaced the provision on fossil fuels that was removed.

The Holiday Shut-down

After serving as your Chairman for almost two and one-half years, it’s finally time so step down and turn the Chamber leadership over to Ann Garten, who once served as Chair over ten years ago and is stepping up to help make the transition seamless. Because this will be my last monthly column, I thought I’d reflect on how to end the year.

December has always been a month of closing down for the year after enjoying the Thanksgiving Holiday with family and friends. It’s also a month of preparing for the Christmas and New Year’s holidays before starting over again in January.

What I like about this time of year most is that process of closure; taking a final breath at the end of the year after charging hard for 11 months and finally taking stock of where we stand and what we have accomplished. Without this pause, time would simply fly by without having a chance to recollect and recharge our batteries.

I’ve always said that the period between Thanksgiving and New Year was meant to start concluding what you have started without initiating anything new. Pretty simple. The hard part is to follow through with this in order to catch your breath.

The fun part of this time of the year is actually experiencing it as a month-long holiday and doing things that you would never think of doing and actually enjoy the shut-down. I’ve always had the week between Christmas and New Year off as part of the annual aerospace industry closure. I think that was the time of the year in the day when companies re-tooled their manufacturing lines and factories and prepared for the new year. For workers, it was a free vacation without having to use your vacation days.

For me, I’m going to get into the holiday spirit early and take the week before Thanksgiving off, go up to my cabin north of Yosemite and enjoy the solitude and early snow.

That should help me prepare for December when I promise to slow down to half-speed, take Business Fraud and Identify Theft – Do you know your risk, responsibility and exposure?

If you use the Internet, access social networks, accept credit cards, or use mobile devices, you’re vulnerable to business fraud and identity theft. There were 17.6 million identity theft incidents last year according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics and nearly one-third of all small businesses are affected by fraud with an average financial loss of $154,000 – an amount that can be devastating for a small business running on tight margins.

You may think, why would I be targeted? All companies, regardless of size or type of business, are vulnerable to fraud and today, all individuals are susceptible to identity theft. You have valuable information that cyber criminals seek, such as bank account information, personal information, employee and customer records, your business finances, and access to larger networks.

If it happened to you, do you know how to detect it? Or how to fix it? The signs are not as clear as an empty bank account. And for businesses, it’s not just an IT problem. As an owner or manager, you have a legal responsibility to safeguard sensitive information. Cleaning up afterward is never as easy as following best practices to prevent fraud or identity theft in the first place.

The Chamber is here to help you understand your risk, responsibility and exposure in all of these areas and how to take the proper steps in prevention.

Join us on January 21st from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the Crowne Plaza Redondo Beach and Marina. At our workshop, a panel of experts will share with us how to detect, prevent and resolve fraud and identity theft incidents, and what you need to know about important legal gotcha’s, EMV credit card compliance, and solutions to safeguard your business and identity. This workshop is for business owners, managers, solopreneurs, staff involved with maintaining internal controls and anyone interested in learning about business fraud and identity theft prevention.

ChamberMail offers these benefits:

- It's targeted - Mass advertising (TV, print, radio, etc.) can be expensive and isn’t always an option for small businesses. But Direct Mail can focus on a smaller group of individuals who are more likely to respond to your offer, giving you more bang for your buck.
- It's personal - With ChamberMail, you can address your customers by name, speak to them individually, and appeal to their interests. And when customers feel that you understand their needs, they’re more likely to respond. In fact, 55 percent of consumers “look forward” to discovering the mail they receive.
- It’s flexible - From letters to postcards to brochures, there is a large variety of inexpensive and easy formats you can use to create your direct mail campaign. You can add impact by including a special offer or free sample in the envelope.
- It’s tangible - ChamberMail allows you to physically place your message in your customers’ hands and encourage interaction. Along with an engaging message, you can make an unforgettable impression by incorporating elements that actively involve the customer, like stickers, and coupons.
- It’s measurable - ChamberMail is one of the few media channels that gives you the ability to track the success of your campaign. It’s as simple as counting the inquiries you received or counting the number of coupons redeemed. By tracking and analyzing your results, you’ll see what’s working and can make adjustments to future mailings if needed.
- It’s easy and cost-effective - You don’t have to be a Direct Mail expert with a big budget to advertise with ChamberMail. Compared with electronic media and costly media mixed campaigns, Direct Mail is easily the winner. If you’re a member of the Chamber of commerce you can take advantage of, you will save even more time and money.

In all, it was a very busy year in the legislature. There were a large number of newly elected Freshman legislators that were navigating their first year in the assembly and senate respectively. Both of Redondo Beach’s state legislative officials, Assemblyman Hadley and Senator Allen, were first year elected representatives in Sacramento. We thank them for their hard work and look forward to what will come in 2016.

Focus on the Facts to See Why The Waterfront is the Right Choice
By: Steve Goldstein

The Waterfront has been in the works for quite a while—years, actually. Even though the process is still far from over, a huge milestone was reached last month with the release of the Draft Environmental Impact Report (DEIR), which is now public and available for comment through January.

The DEIR has all of the analyses we’ve been waiting for such as traffic, noise, parking and coastal access. You name it, it’s there. These analyses are important because they show us the potential impacts of the project from all angles, and most importantly, how to mitigate those impacts so that the final version of the project is the best it can be.

However, even though the report has only just been released, a lot of false numbers and misinformation have been going around about the project for many months.

I am a staunch supporter of The Waterfront, as well as a resident who understands how essential this project is to building a future that we can all be proud of. As such, I want to ensure that all residents have the opportunity to get the facts before taking a position on the project.

HERE ARE JUST A FEW OF MY FAVORITE FACTS:

- Seaside Lagoon will no longer be heated by the power plant but open to natural tidal flow year round.
- There will be a public market that will have fresh and local foods and will also house some of our legacy tenants.
- The bike path will no longer go through the parking structure, which will be rebuilt, and there will be 11 acres of open space.
- The Waterfront will economically benefit the community by creating over 2,500 jobs and bringing in more than $3 million annually in tax revenue.
- The Waterfront is only 73% of the net new square footage voters allowed the project to be when they approved Measure G.
- And to clear up misconceptions:
  - The Waterfront will not be a mall. Retail accounts for approximately only 20% of the project square footage.
  - The reconnection of Pacific Avenue will relieve congestion and make vehicular circulation more efficient.
  - None of the buildings will be taller than three stories, as mandated by Measure G.
  - But these facts are still just the tip of the iceberg. Find out more about The Waterfront and why it is right for the Redondo Beach community by talking to informed supporters like me or contacting The Waterfront team directly—they are always happy to talk. Let’s keep Redondo, Redondo, but make it even better than it already is.

Tip of the Month from Your Health & Wellness Committee
December is a Time for Celebrations, Not Stress

The holiday season is a time for celebrations, but often brings unwelcome guests - stress and depression. And it’s no wonder. The holidays present a dizzying array of demands such as parties, shopping, baking, cleaning and entertaining, to name a few. Many people don’t even realize how stressed they are, but it takes a toll both physically and mentally.

No matter what stresses you out, research suggests how much it will hurt your health depends on how resilient you are and whether you have stress control strategies in place, such as regular exercise, a mindfulness practice, or deep breathing or exercises. Many Chamber members help, with classes like yoga, pilates, cycling, and other healthy ways to deal with stress. We also have members to assist with home care for a loved one or yourself. By using these resources, we can all enjoy the holidays!

Here are some signs you’re stressed to the max - and don’t even know it:

- You can’t make decisions
- You feel fatigued all the time
- Or you’re revved up and can’t sleep
- You’re catching colds, feeling sick more often
- You feel anxious
- You’re making silly mistakes
- Your digestion is out of whack
- You’ve gained weight
BCHD Named to National ‘Best Places to Work’ List

Modern Healthcare Magazine recently revealed its 2015 ranking of the 100 “Best Places to Work in Healthcare” and Beach Cities Health District (BCHD) was included on the celebrated list for the fourth time in five years. The Redondo Beach-based preventive health agency ranked 28th overall and 13th in the provider/insurer subcategory – climbing up several spots from its 2014 rankings (39th overall and 15th provider/insurer).

In particular, BCHD garnered praise from Modern Healthcare for involving all staff members in its annual strategic planning process and for maintaining a low rate of voluntary employee turnover. The publication also cited BCHD’s wide variety of employee wellness and prevention incentives as key differentiators, including paid time off for volunteer work in the community, access to onsite fitness facilities and a flexible work schedule.

“We have been committed to creating a culture of health in the workplace for many years because we believe it’s the key to employee engagement and productivity,” said Susan Burden, Beach Cities Health District CEO. “And as a public health agency, it’s important we lead by example and model the healthy behaviors internally that we want to see in our community.”

Now in its eighth year, the Best Places to Work in Healthcare program recognizes workplaces that empower employees to deliver the best possible health services and programs to clients and customers. Specifically, workplaces are judged on their office culture and leadership, employee benefits, employee health and wellness programs as well as the results of an anonymous employee opinion/satisfaction survey. To see the complete list, visit modern-healthcare.com.

some long lunches with friends and colleagues, go out to dinner as much as possible, do my shopping for gifts throughout the month instead of at the last moment, and actually spend some time thinking about what I want to do next year.

I’ve done end of year exercises for over thirty years as required in my job at Hughes, TRW, and Boeing. But doing it as a matter of personal necessity is something else that really does make sense if you think about it.

I promise to spend the last month of this year experiencing 2015 and all of the great things that happened. So don’t be surprised if you get a call or an email from me inviting you to a business lunch or beverage after work. All I suggest is that you take advantage of this before the new year hits and we charge back into things with new energy and enthusiasm.

Just give it a try.

erty into a project that enhances our new waterfront. This will only happen if potential developers can feel comfortable that their investment will not be made in vain. It is important that the city and community come together and support whoever is coming in and welcome them with open arms.

There are so many exciting things that could happen in Redondo Beach in 2016. These projects would transform our community for the better, while simultaneously providing the city financial resources to provide the highest level of services to residents. They would also make Redondo Beach the premier destination for both visitors and residents. Next year could be pivotal for the future of Redondo Beach. Let’s do our best to ensure that there is More to Sea in Redondo Beach.

Thank you all for supporting the Chamber. Happy Holidays!

Networking Tip of the Month

Don't take "no," personally. Everyone is busy. For most people, it's simply a matter of timing. If you catch them on a good day, then they will happily talk or meet with you. If they're swamped, however, then a simple "no" might be all that you get. Don't take it to heart. In most cases, it's not a reflection of you or what you said.
